PLEASANT ENTERTAINMENT. Pupils of St. Anthony's Sunday School

Give Good Program.

An enjoyable entertainment was given in the town hall of Brooklyn last night for the benefit of St. Anthony's Church. The hall was crowded to its utmost capacity ard the young people who participated all acquitted themselves with credit. After a piano solo by Miss Agnes Dowling there was an operetta, "Jack the Giant Killer," with a cast comprising Misses Winifred Barnholt, Mamie Mulligan, Anna Leesnitzer, Masters Harry Barnholt, George Hamilton, Roger Brooks, Richard Mahoney and others, which was well sung and well acted. Then there were tableaux, which were quite effective and the following musical selections. Duet, "Wilt Thou Sew My But-tons On," Miss Mary and Master Richard Mahoney; piano solo, Miss Florence Lyons; vocal solo. "Convent Bells," Miss Mary Mahoney; song and dance, "In Olden Times," Miss Winifred Barnholt and Master George Hamilton.

At the conclusion of the program, which was entirely by the Sunday school scholars, premiums were awarded as follows: Girls, first class, Agnes Dowling, Edith McGee; second class, Agnes Rodler, Anna Crook ex aeguo; third class, Mary Mulligan, Frances Moran; fourth class, Vernet Hetfield, Kathleen Mahoney; fifth class, Marie and Kathleen Mahoney; fifth class, Marie and Anna Bohnert. CAREER OF AGLIPAY

Leader of the Independent Philippine Church.

STORIES OF CRUELTY

PROPOSED UNION WITH THE PROTESTANTS.

Success of the New Movement in the Provinces-Attitude of Native Priests.

BY WILLIAM E. CURTIS. Special Correspondence of The Evening Star and Chicago Record-Herald.

MANILA, May 21, 1904.

Gregorio Aglipay, the leader of the new Independent Catholic Church in the Philippine Islands, is a native of Manila, born in 1865, educated in the Jesuit schools of this city and in the seminary of the Dominican monks. He was ordained by them for the priesthood in 1890, and, having a bright mind and winning manners, became a great favorite with the friars of all the monastic orders. In 1896, however, he fell into disfavor because of his relations with the leaders of the insurrection and for denouncing Archbishop Nozaleda and the government for the official murder of Dr. Jose Rizal, a brilliant young oculist, who, having been sent to Germany to study his profession, fell in with atheists and agnostics and acquired socialistic tendencies. He was regarded as a dangerous man, was betrayed by the friars and condemned and executed by order of the archbishop as a heretic and an enemy of the church state. Rizal's execution was the signal for the uprising of 1896, and Aglipay, with almost every other native Filipino of intelligence, denounced the act and joined the revolution. For that he was excommuni-

Alleged Cruelties.

He immediately joined the insurrectos and was made chaplain general of Aguinaldo's army. He remained in the field continuously and was one of the last to surrender to the Americans. On several occasions he is said to have commanded troops in the field, and many stories are told of his cruelty, treachery and inhuman treatment of his own men and of American and Spanish prisoners who happened to fall into his hands. It is even said that when he accepted the amnesty proclamation and took the oath of allegiance his own soiders endeavored to kill him in revenge for his reatment of them. Rev. Mr. Rodgers, who is at the head of Rev. Mr. Rodgers, who is at the head of the Presbyterian mission work here, does not believe these stories, nor those which are told concerning Aglipay's vices. He is accused of intemperance and other forms of immorality, but Mr. Rodgers says that the Protestant ministers have never been able to substantiate any of the charges, and he believes that Aglipay, judged from local standards, is a man of excellent char-acter and exemplary life.

local standards, is a man of excellent character and exemplary life.

There is no question that if Aguinaldo's insurrection had been successful a state church would have been organized with Aglipay at its head, and when the revolutionary leaders accepted the amnesty offered by the government he determined to carry out the plan under the American authorities, taking his chances of being officially recognized by the government. In pursuance of this plan he sought a conference with the American protestant pastors of the city, which was arranged by the Rev. Jay C. Goodrich, agent of the Ameri-can Bible Society, and took place at his of-

There were present, besides Mr. Goodrich, Rev. James B. Rodgers of the Presbyterian Church, Rev. Mr. Stuntz, presiding elder, and Rev. J. L. McLaughlin of the Methodist Church. Aglipay was accompanied by a former revolutionary leader of great ability and good education. Senor Isabello de las Reyes, a professional agitator, who has given the government a great deal of Aglipay's Proposition. Senor Aglipay, with great eloquence, described the situation of the Catholic Church in the islands; he pictured the popular hostility to the friars, the ill-treatment of the native priests, and the unpopularity of everything Spanish. He represented that the native members of the Catholic Church were ready for a revolt against the ecclesiastical authorities and only waited for a leader to arouse them to action. He proposed a union of interests between the Protestants and himself and the establishment of one general state church in opposite ment of one general state church in oppo-sition to the Roman Catholics. He seemed to have very little idea of Protestantism and theological differences had not enter-ed into his calculation. His mind was en-tirely absorbed by his hatred for the Catholic authorities and the friars and a pa-triotic desire to lead a religious revolution. The Protestant ministers pointed out the difficulties and defects of his plans, and endeavored to convince him of the impracticability and impossibility of organizing a state church. They endeavored to convince him that religion could not be safely mixed with politics, and that the only movement in which they could join him was for the conversion of the people to Protest-antism with the Holy Scriptures as their guide. They endeavored to convince him that his proposed movement could result in nothing but failure, and secured from him a promise that he would do nothing without further consulting them. Independent Church Proclaimed. Aglipay was evidently disappointed at his reception. He supposed that the Protestants would gladly enter any movement to injure the Catholic influence, and their suggestions were not at all to his liking. They heard nothing further from him for more than a year, but it appears that he was at work with great energy in the meantime, for in October, 1902, he proclaimed the independent Catholic Church of the Philip-pines, called a convention of priests and laymen who sympathized with him, adopted a constitution, was elected archbishop, appointed several bishops from among the native priests, placed the miter of the archbishop in bls own hand and consecrated himself with great ceremony in an open square in Manila one Sunday afternoon. There was a tremendous sensation, and the Filipinos, who are always emotional, and easily moved by excitement, followed him about the streets in great crowds. For a time it seemed as if all the common people in this city would leave the Roman church and follow him, as they can easily be induced to follow anybody who appeals to their patriotism. The idea of an inde-pendent Filipino church was very popular, and if Aglipay had been a man of stronger character and greater wisdom he might have met with much greater success. But mother church-Success in the Provinces.

In the provinces his propaganda was much more effective, for there the people had felt more severely the oppression of the friars, and many of the parishes were entirely without priests. The movement received its greatest impetus early in 1903, immediately after the publication by Les XIII of a papal bull, "Quae Mari Sirico," concerning the condition and future of the church in the Philippines. The holy father choir, consisting of Miss Ethel Holtzclaw, soprano; Mrs. Bessie B. Mercer, contralto; Mr. W. J. Caulfield, tenor; Dr. Andrew B. Mitchell, basso. The musical program consisted of the burial chant, "Father, let me know mine end, and the number of my days, that I may be certified how long I have to live," and three hyms, "Art Thou Weary."

"Tead, Kindly Light," and "Sun of My Soul."

impaired." This was regarded as a grace-ful approval by Leo XIII of the American policy of religious liberty and freedom of worship, and was appreciated by the com-

The pope then proceeds to discuss details in twelve articles, and provides for the re-organization of the church on the American plan. He promises seven suffragan dio-ceses in place of four (which arrangement, however, has since been revoked); he ad-monishes the members of the church to ac-cept the political situation and support the government, and forbids ecclesiastics to in-terfere in political affairs. He cautions the friars not to assume any authority in ecclesiastical matters or interfere with the bishops. He quotes II Corinthians, vi:3; Acts. xx:28, and other passages of Scrip-Acts. xx:28, and other passages of Scripture, and the utterances of several of his predecessors concerning the proper behavior of the monastic orders, speaks very plainly concerning their immorality, and says: "It is therefore most particularly enjoined on the members of the orders that they observe the obligations of their vows, giving no one motive for scandal," and he commands them "to return to the manner of living proper to their form of establishment, entirely consecrated to the labors of the holy ministry, to the betterment of the good customs of the people and to the progood customs of the people and to the pro-motion of harmony between the civil and religious interests."

Native Priests Dissatisfied. One would have thought that such a pro-nunclamento from the pope would have given satisfaction to the native priests, but it had the contrary effect. While they approved all the holy father said in condemnation and correction of the friars, they were unable to find any reference to themselves in the document, which wounded their pride and gave them an excuse for renewing the old complaint that they are ignored by the church authorities. Somehow or another the impression got abroad that the number of dioceses was to be increased in order that several native priests might be created bishops. In fact, Aglipay went so far as to assert that Archbishop Chapelle gave assurances to that effect, others, more conservative, say that he only others, more conservative, say that he only promised to recommend the appointment of natives; but whether he carried out that promise or not, no native bishops have been appointed; the number of dioceses has not been increased, and American strangers to the country and to the records have been approximately the country and to the people have been se-lected and intrusted with ecclesiastical authority. While Aglipay was polite enough to tell me that they were more agreeable than Spaniards, he nevertheless declared that their appointment was an affront to and repudiation of every native priest in the island. He has used that circumstance with great suggests in appropriate the Williems with great success in convincing the Fili-pino clergy that they have nothing to ex-pect either from the pope or from the American bishops.

Aglipay's Appearance.

There is a decided difference of opinion, as I told you yesterday, concerning Aglipay's character, loyalty, morals and motives. He is not a bad-looking man. He is slight of stature, with graceful manners and considerable dignity. His complexion and features would remind you very much of those of a North American Indian has a pleasant, musical voice and talks well, but understands very little English, and in my conversation with him spoke through an interpreter. His surroundings were quite humble and monastic. He cer-tainly does not live in luxury, and I am told that he spends very little money for his own benefit. He is not a man of learning. His education was superficial. He has no knowledge of the world, and has never were quite humble and monastic. been beyond the shores of the Island of His ideas of the United States and the policy of our government toward the church are very vague, and he seems to think that Archbishop Harty is in some reamer under the control of President Roosevelt. He has no theology. He scarceknows what the word means and evidently knows what the word means and evidently has read very little on any subject. But he is smart and cunning, like Aguinaldo and other of the Filipino leaders, and evidently is not to be trusted very far. At the same time one can scarcely credit the statements that are made concerning his cruelty and immorality. He does not look like a cruel or an intemperate or a licentious man, and if there is anything in ap-

VETS AT BARBECUE. Confederates and Others Entertained

by Mr. J. J. Darlington. The barbecue tendered by Mr. J. J. Darlington of this city to the confederate societies of Washington yesterday at his summer place at Herndon, Va., was a successful and delightful event. The early morning train carried nearly two hundred persons, while others followed in the afternoon. This contingent was augmented by members of Virginia camps and veterans of the neighborhood, swelling the number of guests to fully four hundred, all of whom were regally entertained.

Mr. Darlington, his sister, Miss Darlington, and his two young daughters. Misses Annie and Lizzie, were gracious in the reception of and attention to the guests. The feature of the barbecue, an immense ox and four sheep roasted whole, was novel and amazing to most of those present send. and amazing to most of those present, and was viewed with the utmost interest. The program of the day's entertainment The program of the day's entertainment was without prearrangement, and consisted of impromptu speeches, singing of southern songs and the reign of good-fellowship generally, proving thoroughly enjoyable from beginning to finish. The meeting was held in a large grove near the residence of Mr. Darlington, in which a large and commodious stand had been erected for speakers and the seating of many who desired sheiter. An interesting feature was the an-

ter. An interesting feature was the ap-pearance of the remnant, though well preserved, of a carriage formerly owned by Jefferson Davis, from which several of the speeches were made. speeches were made.

In the forenoon short speeches were made by Maj. McDowell Carrington, Mr. Wm. A. Gordon and Judge F. H. Mackey. Mr. Joshua Davis sang "All Quiet Along the Potomac Tonight," and referred to his personal knowledge of its author and authorship. Col. J. B. Erwin read. by request, a poem fitting the occasion.

Dinner was announced at 1 o'clock, the long tables forming a hollow square in true military style, and the abundant supply. from the juicy meats to the delicious coffee and pies, found happy and hearty patrons, A battalion of ladies had charge of the table arrangements, and were energetic and generous in their attentions.

After dinner Judge Wm. L. Chambers of the Spanish court of claims made an inter-esting address, but was interrupted by a heavy shower. The proceedings were soon reopened, however, when Lieutenant Gov-ernor of Virginia Joseph Williard was called to the stand and made an address.

It was known that the two daughters of Mr. Darlington had been largely instru-mental in the conception and promulgation of the idea of extending this invitation to a testimonial of their high appreciation of the courtesy and attention shown them, presented to each of the young daughters of Mr. Darlington a gold pin embodying the design of the confederate battle flag. The veterans, after a vote of thanks to Mr. Darlington for his generous and hospitable entertainment, lined up and paid their re-spects to the two young ladies who had been so deeply interested in their behalf. The balance of the day was given over to although there were several popular meetings, and two or three public disturbances and controversies in Manila over the possession of church property, the excitement quieted down. Aglipay proved unequal to the occasion. He lost his opportunity, and the people of Manila remain loyal to the
